

Prime location for business with 26 metres of Highway 1 frontage - sweeping views across Rockingham Bay from Dunk Island to the Hinchinbrook channel

This site was last sold in 1892. A mango tree planted during Queensland's first decade still grows there. Part of an historic family hamlet of Cardwell's first local government chairman Johann Hubinger. A location rich with history and prospect. This large vacant block along 26m of Cardwell's main street (Bruce Highway) offers a high profile opportunity for businesses catering to both the region and tourism. It has Highway 1 access and is central to government and business precincts.
